

1. Employee Leave Policy

Employees can apply for annual leave through the HR portal.

Employees are entitled to 20 days of annual leave per year.

Employees should submit their leave request at least three days before the requested leave date.

Employees can check their remaining leave balance through the HR portal.

Leave requests must be approved by the employee's supervisor before the leave is considered confirmed.

2. Salary Information

Employees can view salary information through the payroll system.

Employees can view their monthly salary statement after payroll processing is completed.

Salary information may include basic salary, allowances, deductions, and net salary.

Employees should contact the payroll department if they identify an error in their salary statement.

Employees should keep their payroll account credentials confidential.

3. Employee Attendance Policy

Employees must record their attendance using the company's attendance system.

Employees should record their check-in when they start work.

Employees should record their check-out when they finish work.

Employees should report missing attendance records to their supervisor.

Attendance records may be used for payroll and HR administration.

4. Work From Home Policy

Employees may work from home when remote work has been approved by their supervisor.

Employees working remotely must remain available during their approved working hours.

Employees must have access to the required company systems while working remotely.

Employees should inform their supervisor if they cannot work remotely as scheduled.

Remote work arrangements may depend on the employee's job responsibilities.

5. Employee Benefits

Eligible employees can receive benefits according to company policy.

Employees can contact HR to learn about available benefits.

Medical benefits may be available to eligible employees.

Employees should follow the company's procedure when submitting benefit claims.

Benefit eligibility may depend on the employee's employment terms.

6. Employee Onboarding

New employees must complete the onboarding process after joining the company.

Employees must provide the required documents to the HR department.

New employees receive information about company policies and procedures during onboarding.

Employees may receive company system accounts after completing the required onboarding steps.

Employees should contact HR if they have questions about the onboarding process.

7. Password Policy

Employees must keep their company passwords confidential.

Employees should not share their passwords with other people.

Employees should use a strong password for company systems.

Employees should change their password when requested by the IT department.

Employees should report suspected unauthorized access to the IT department.

8. Training Policy

Employees may be required to complete mandatory company training.

Training courses may be provided through the company's learning portal.

Employees should complete assigned training within the specified deadline.

Managers can monitor the training status of their team members.

Employees can contact HR or the training department for training-related questions.

9. Promotion Policy

Employee promotions are based on company policies and applicable performance criteria.

Employees may be considered for promotion based on their role, experience, and performance.

Managers may recommend employees for promotion.

The HR department reviews promotion-related information according to company procedures.

Employees can contact HR for questions about the promotion process.

10. Employee Resignation Policy

Employees who want to resign should submit a resignation request through the appropriate company process.

Employees should provide the required notice period according to their employment terms.

The supervisor and HR department review the resignation request.

Employees must return company property before completing the exit process.

HR provides information about the final settlement and other exit procedures.